

TAKE A DUMPLING

And eat it by Sarah Decker and Shannon Finnell

ometimes, late at night — and hell, even at brunch time — a hot, steamy, fresh dumpling really hits the spot.

That was Reid Frumkin's theory in 2010 when he and his friends evolved some poop jokes into Dump City Dumplings, a successful Bend eatery. They opened a Eugene cart earlier this year. Whether people think it's funny "depends on the person," Frumkin says, but even those who don't share the lighthearted philosophy can appreciate a delectable dumpling.

"Essentially, it's kind of a Chinese version of a sandwich with dough on the outside and ingredients on the inside," Frumkin says, and Dump City keeps the flavors spinning like a globe: Pad Thai, four-cheese pizza and Chinese-style pork are always on the menu, but a fourth flavor rotates among options like chicken alfredo, beef broccoli and sweet curried ostrich.

With their Eugene addition, Frumkin says they've still prioritized keeping ingredients fresh. "We source almost everything locally and organically," Frumkin says. "About 90 percent of our produce comes from Junction City."

Of all the flavors we have sampled at Dump City, not a one has steered us wrong. Each dumpling, plumped to perfection, delivers the most amazing flavors that fresh, local ingredients can bring.

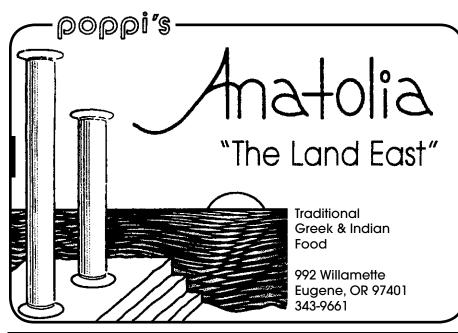

The standard Chinese-style pork dumpling, however, is epic. This is traditional Chinese food at its best. All of the flavors from the pork to the veggies on down to their housemade teriyaki sauce — to be artfully injected into your bun — blend to deliver the most perfect meal, be it a lunch on the go or a little something to stumble home with after hitting the bar. ■ offee. For those of you who embrace it, it is many things: It wakes you up, keeps you going, accompanies chocolate so nicely. Living in the great Northwest, we are surrounded by amazing options when it comes to selecting a cup of brew.

For me, that choice is favored to be something bold in flavor, smooth to the finish and without bitterness. Never in my travels have I found a cup that so completely fulfills my requirements as my first cup of Caffé Pacori coffee.

I just had to meet the roaster, the man responsible for showing me what a great cup of coffee can taste like. At first when I walked into Caffé Pacori, I was confused. Surely the guy standing before me was just an employee, I thought. The man responsible for the wood-roasted perfection of Pacori must be at least 8 feet tall, arms like tree trunks and a heard of moss.

But no, Eric Pierce looks like a guy I might know, a guy I might grab a drink with, a guy I can relate to.

Pierce showed me the entire operation, from stem to stern. It took about four minutes. Coffee roasting is, all at once, painfully simple and dramatically complex. The beans, brought in from various regions and blended expertly to provide each roast with the maximum flavor, are placed in one of two roasters — gas or wood — and then roasted, bagged and shipped.

And while all of that seems simple enough, Pierce has been honing his skills since he was a teenager in upstate Idaho, roasting beans for kicks. Those kicks turned into a passion, and he has been the master roaster at Caffé Pacori for the past eight years. The roasting process — a science of its own — is mastered and polished so that to the uninitiated, it seems quite simple.

But one taste and you know you are dealing with a black belt in the art. For if there is but one defining difference among these many Northwest-produced coffee beans, it is the finished product, that first sip. And Pacori has the credentials: A two-year-running prize collector at the Oregon State Fair, once for Best Breakfast Coffee and once for Best Taste Overall, for their wood-roasted decaf, no less.

As a staple of the Eugene-based food community, Caffé Pacori can be found at many of the restaurants around town, as well as being served at Perk Cafe and available for purchase at Kiva, Market of Choice and from the café's website. However and wherever you grab a cup, be prepared to sit and savor it, because it's likely that first taste will be logged in your memory for years to come.

For info on Caffé Pacori, see caffepacori.com or call 868-1256.

t's not a hobby, it's not a job, it's a lifestyle."

If you've ever made a day of a visit to a u-pick farm, or picked up a CSA box or, heck, even grown your own comestibles straight out of the earth, you may better understand what Moon Time Farm owner Nicki Tabb means when she explains farming as, above all else, a lifestyle.

Moon Time Farm is a three-acre produce and chicken farm that also specializes in annual and perennial herbs. It's also the place Tabb and full-time farmer and partner John Neilson live.

"When we got here three years ago, there was nothing," Tabb says. Now the farm produces 5,000 to 6,000 pounds of food a year. And it's open to anyone who cares to stop by and harvest some produce to take home.

A cheerful sign beckons passersby on the tucked away country road: Moon Time Farm. You've found it, the place where countryside and a quiet residential neighborhood seamlessly coexist.

In addition to providing for local customers through community-supported agriculture deliveries, they also encourage visitors to come out and get their hands in the dirt. "We have volunteer workdays on Saturdays," Tabb says. "You can work on the farm for a few hours, take home whatever food you need, learn what you want to learn, get some exercise, touch the earth and connect."

And for those less inclined to noodle around in the dirt, "There's all kinds of things that people can do to participate in the food experience," Tabb says. In return, she makes a big lunch for all the volunteers. "If you're gonna come work for me, I'm going to feed you," Tabb says. "That's always the deal."

"It's all about giving people access to food," Tabb says. "We really want to encourage people to make that connection."

And connecting is easy when all it takes is a short drive out to the country, westward out of town toward Veneta:

As you head straight out West 11th toward Veneta, the world opens into a broad expanse of fields and marshland. Fern Ridge Lake appears and watery expanses make up the view off both sides of the highway. An eagle dives for a fishy meal, scooping at the water with scaly, bright yellow feet punctuated with long, curved talons. He got his meal and I, too, was on the hunt for nourishment.

So what can you expect to find at Moon Time? Well, produce for sure: kale, beets, spinach, pumpkins, pole beans, carrots, peppers and tomatoes, to name a few. In addition, they have flowers available for picking — peonies, daffodils and foxglove — and pear trees. There are also preparations to have a good number of different berry crops in the future, available for those who want to come out and pick their own. "Next year there'll be lots of strawberries for people to pick," Tabb says. "They should be able to sit in the middle of the path and just eat."

Scheduling a trip before you come is a good idea, Tabb says. "We're always here," she says, but "it's best to email us or to call, just to check."

Tabb and Neilson, along with the help of a progression of Willing Workers on Organic Farms interns who work in exchange for food and a place to stay, already have hundreds of plant starts ready to go. And they try to grow what people ask for, Tabb says. "We ask people over the winter: What kinds of things do you like, what do you eat more of, what would you like us to grow more of?"

And if anyone is interested in medicinal herbs and they're having a hard time finding something, Moon Time Farms can grow it, Tabb says. "If it's medicinal, I'm probably going to grow it eventually."

Not only can you help decide what kind of food the farm might start producing in the future, you may already be helping Moon Time without even knowing it: The farm uses compost that is sourced from Eugene, in the form of leaves and compost straight from Eugene's own Off the Waffle

Sourcing your food close to home can be pretty darn satisfying. "It feels so much better when you see what you've done and then you get to eat it," Tabb says. "So many people lose that, being in the city."

To find out what's available each month and to schedule a farm visit, head over to www.moontimefarms.com. They can also be found in the Willamette Local Farm and Food quide.

THE FRESHMO

hen you first see KC Brooks, you might do a double take: He's as fresh, stylish and brightly colored as the food cart he's named Sammitch. The very health-conscious Brooks stocks his cart with organic produce from Living Earth Farm, when it's available, and he uses herbs, lettuce and arugula from his own garden. Many of Brooks' trademark recipes, including the tuna melt and his ever-popular Orgasmitch (half meatloaf, half bacon), are straight from his mother's cookbook. Sammitch also features a Stop-and-Go Chicken Burger with red and green peppers, a Vegan Bean-In Burger and deep-fried Oreos, Nutter Butters and carrots.

One of the tastiest sandwiches on the Sammitch menu is the Turkey Gobbler. The perfect embodiment of Thanksgiving, the Turkey Gobbler's patty is ground turkey mixed with onions, mushrooms, celery, cranberries and stovetop stuffing served on wholewheat bread and open to an array of sauces handcrafted by Brooks himself. We recommend the cran-mayo or pesto presto.

While Sammitch is already thriving, Brooks is especially excited about his latest expansion project: making Sammitch mobile via a new food truck. "The coolest, baddest, most colorful spectacular truck you see in Eugene, period," Brooks calls it. "It's going to spark a lot of people's imaginations and I'm really excited about it."

Brooks says the mobile Sammitch truck will feature everything from "sandwiches to full-on crazy soups." Offering paninis, Spanish bocadillos, po' boys, Vietnamese sandwiches, falafel sandwiches, smoothies and, of course, all of the Sammitch classics, Brooks says his mobile Sammitch food truck will be the answer to a market "that nobody is capitalizing on."

Brooks needs location tips, though. If any local businesses are interested in having the Sammitch food truck parked near their location one day a week, give KC Brooks a call at 408-309-2074. ■

Sammitch is now located at 466 E. 13th Ave., 408-309-2074, www.sammitchtime.com

HOTOS BY TODD COOPER

A MOVEABLE FEAST?

Redevelopment may swallow the Courthouse Garden BY ALEXANDRA NOTMAN

nee-deep in rows of leafy tomato and potato plants at the Courthouse Garden, Tom Ruck knows that the ground upon which he stands may soon host condominiums. From beneath his cap and bushy white brow, Ruck squints at the midday sun reflecting off the stainless-steel panels of the Wayne L. Morse United States Courthouse. December will mark the three-year anniversary of the garden and the expiration of the University of Oregon's lease on the property. "It's upsetting to think about all the work that has gone into this and just to stop like that ... "he says, scanning the urban bounty. "It was just a hole in the ground. Look at it now; it looks like a little piece of paradise."

Ruck is right. The site is unrecognizable as the mud hole it was three years ago when Judge Ann Aiken spearheaded the collaboration — between the City of Eugene, the UO and the Federal Re-entry program that helps former prisoners transition back into society — that created a community garden. It was designed by Ann Bettman, who supervised the UO's famed urban farm for 30 years.

Today, 7-foot-high artichoke stalks tower above rows of garlic, peppers and beans. Strawberry plants spill onto the sidewalks. The 2-acre site hosts the "Courthouse Garden" course, taught by UO adjunct landscape architecture instructors Lorri Nelson and Robin Seloover, as well as re-entry participants like Ruck. The 40-some students learn about everything from ideal composting conditions to regional planting and harvesting to healthy cooking.

The harvest from the Courthouse Garden is also spread across the community to organizations like the Eugene Mission, HIV Alliance, Relief Nursery and Looking Glass. "The whole goal is to bring these diverse groups of people together," says Nelson. "We are all here to garden and grow food and send it back into the community."

Standing in the rain with a plastic flat of ruby-red straw-berries, UO senior Robbie McNulty says the Courthouse Garden changed his life. The end of the term has come and students are scattered around the 8th Avenue and Ferry Street plot, picking bouquets of bachelor buttons, gathering greens, tilling black soil for incoming blue corn and collecting strawberries to bring to the Looking Glass New Roads center. "Science can be detached," says McNulty, who recalls a day when he and Ruck discussed permaculture until it was time to go home. "Working with Tom made me realize how dynamic community is."

By the end of class, 22 pounds each of lettuce greens and strawberries have been collected. Students pack the produce into the bed of a pickup truck, with bunches of parsley and the season's first head of broccoli thrown in for good measure. Seloover then zips over to Looking Glass New Roads center, where Chris Mirabel, the center's program manager, is waiting. Mirabel and Seloover bring the food to outreach worker August Sabini (see Happening People, 6/7) in the kitchen. New Roads serves about 70 meals a day to homeless and at-risk youth between the ages 16-21.

"We wanted to connect homeless youth to the community, and they wanted to connect the garden to the community," Sabini says. "The food they bring to us sticks to their bones. Especially if they can't eat the next day."

In 2011, the youth used strawberries donated from the garden to prepare strawberry shortcake to share with elderly residents at the Avamere Rehabilitation Center.

The garden's keepers realize their piece of paradise may soon be lost, at least at its current location. Nelson recently met with Assistant City Manager Sarah Medary and Community Development Division Manager Mike Sullivan to discuss the site's future. "They love what we're doing," Nelson says. "It's a great mission, but they're reluctant," she says. "We can move, but we all know that's not an easy thing to do. It took a lot of effort to build this garden."

Sullivan points out that the plan was always for the garden to be temporary, since the site would eventually be commercially or residentially developed. "We expect to discuss future redevelopment options for the site with the City Council sometime in the next few months," says Sullivan. "While it is not likely we will extend the lease for a significant period of time, this has been a great partnership and we'd be happy to help them find a new location."

Ruck splits open a plump fava pod — the beans are ready to eat. He speaks excitedly about the day's harvest. "The salad greens are just fantastic. I picked a bunch of snow peas and peas in the pod that are going to be fresh in the salad." He points to garden beds he helped build and the relationships that have grown; Ruck and McNulty are going fishing next week.

Ruck says he will volunteer in the garden as long as it's there, which he doesn't expect to be long unless a "bighearted donor" comes along. "It would be a shame, but you can't stop progress," Ruck adds.

NU-SHI

Sushi restaurants open just in time for summer by dante zuniga-west ome of us like it saucy and hot, and not frozen but fresh — some of us like it raw. And sushi is the food of choice for Eugene's fish fiends and raw dawgs. Though there is no shortage of local sushi joints, this abundance creates a market where the law of supply and demand battles with the need for quality over quantity. Two new Japanese restaurants just hit the scene, adding to the menagerie of miso and masago that we Eugeneans are so blessed with.

"I saw one person come in and eat 15 plates," Sushi Island waitress Hailey Rose says. "Because it's buffet-style here, we get people who really love to eat."

Rose works a lunch shift at Sushi Island, the hottest new spot to get your wasabi on if you're cruising West 11th. Nestled between Seneca Road and Bailey Hill, right next to Skip's Records & CD World, Sushi Island offers the look and feel of a big-city sushi restaurant but maintains a calm Eugene-ish vibe. The conveyor belt of tasty rolls that travel 'round and 'round the two main seating areas will have you thinking you can eat just one more, even after you've had your fill.

But if you desire something a little more adventurous than the standard fare of spicy tuna and sashimi, Sushi Island boasts a killer menu with monster-themed rolls that deliver mouthfuls of satisfaction. The Godzilla roll, a combination of soft-shell crab, unagi, avocado and masago, is a zingy must-try concoction that lives up to its name. We are also strong advocates for the Angry Dragon — a well-proportioned combo of crab and cucumber, topped with tuna and wasabi tobiko. Oh yeah, then there's the King Kong roll, full of lobster, scallop, crab, avocado and scallion. This island is serious; go there, but mind the monsters.

The Whiteaker is about to become home to a new sushi spot that is unlike any other. Mame, named after the sushi appetizer edamame, is the epitome of fresh — seriously, like, they refuse to own a freezer.

"Frozen is exactly what we don't want to do," owner Taro Kobayashi says. "I'm not here to open a can and feed you. I'm here to open a restaurant."

Mame, next to Olive Juice at 541 Blair, will sneak open its doors on Saturday, June 16. It might be Eugene's most intimate sushi restaurant. Seating only 15 customers at a time, the place embodies the environmentally friendly DIY nature of the city. Customers are encouraged to bring their own pair of chopsticks, which Kobayashi and company will sanitize and store for you at the restaurant.

The folks at Mame are adamant about keeping everything on the menu fresh. Along with no freezer, Kobayashi says all of his fish will be shipped in daily. The place also has its own herb garden and, once Mame is in full swing, the restaurant plans to grow its own edamame as well.

"People might be a little skittish about the no-freezer part, but that's OK," Kobayashi says. "What we offer is a better product."

Kobayashi, who is also a local Kung Fu instructor, says that part of why he is opening the restaurant is his connection with the Eugene community and his support of healthy dieting. He says Mame will also specialize in bizarrely unique dishes that cannot be found elsewhere.

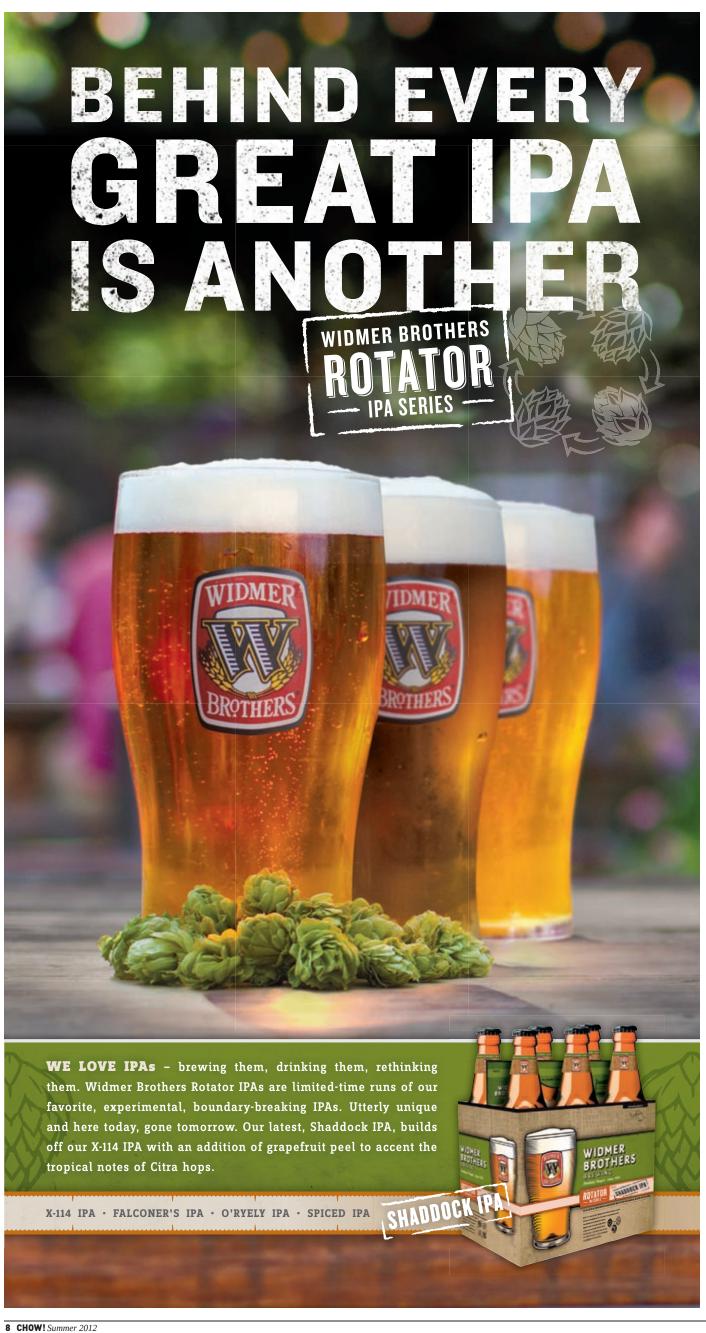

"We want to make Asian- and American-inspired Oregon food," Kobayashi says. "That sounds weird, but come down and check it out for yourself."

We couldn't agree more. But make sure to bring your adventurous spirit — the menu at Mame changes weekly on account of how damn fresh things are. ■

Sushi Island is located at 3215 W. 11th Ave. Mame is located at 541 Blair Blvd.

HERE A MARKET, THERE A MARKET

Meet your farmer at Eugene venues BY SHANNON FINNELL

ekly crowds at

Saturday's Lane County Farmers Market are a testament to how beloved an institution the market is — open each week with Saturday Market at the park blocks — and how much Eugeneans love their farmers. But if the crowds are too overwhelming, you don't have to miss out on meeting your farmer. (Rumors about closing 8th Avenue on Saturdays, using the neighboring parking lot and other market expansions circulate often, and we sure

First, it's worth mentioning that the Lane County Farmers Market is also open 10 am to 3 pm Tuesdays at the park blocks and 2 pm to 6 pm every Thursday at Amazon Community Center.

Weekdays not your bag? No worries, your options remain stellar.

Hideaway Farmers Market, open 9 am to 2 pm every Saturday between Hideaway Bakery and Mazzi's Restaurant, remains open year-round, which market member Erin Reid of Raven Feathers Farm says is unique in Eugene. The market was formed by a small group of Lane County Farmers Market regulars. "About five years ago it started to get extremely expensive to be there for a small farmer," Reid says, "and we wanted more time to interact with our customers."

Now the bustling Hideaway Farmers Market offers the staples: organic fruits and vegetables, local, organic meat of all sorts, plus rarer foods like duck and turkey eggs and heritage goat products. There's even specialty vegetables like hard-to-find varieties of turnips, radishes and rootstalks.

Reid says an important feature of Hideaway Farmers Market is its decision to be dog-friendly — dogs get a free duck egg, which she says is great for their coats.

Parking is available on the other side of the bakery parking lot, and patrons can also use the dog wash parking lot.

Sarah Hucka of Circle H Farm is also co-organizer of the new farmers market in the Whiteaker neighborhood, located in New Day Bakery's courtyard. Open 11 am to 3 pm every Sunday, the market is up and running with local produce, plant starts, meat, cheese, fish and baked goods. "People comment on the great, relaxed atmosphere," Hucka says, which is in tune with the neighborhood philosophy.

Want to venture outside Eugene? Springfield Farmers Market, open 3 pm to 7 pm every Friday at 5th and A streets, gets better every year as NEDCO works to incorporate more local produce plus food vendors and other entertainment — even art projects! It also accepts Oregon Trail (SNAP), WIC and Senior coupons.

Creswell Farmers Market is open 4 pm to 6 pm Tuesdays, year round, at 182 S. 2nd St., and it features vegetables, grass-fed beef and pork, freerange chicken and eggs, pastured lamb, grains in states from whole to flours, preserved foods such as fruit spreads, sauces and fermented foods, according to Market Manager Elyse Grau. On other occasions, visitors might find home-grown sweet potatoes, baby ginger or exotically-named Asian greens.

Also on Sundays, Dexter Lake Farmers Market is open noon to 3 pm, right on Dexter Lake. See www.dexterlake-farmersmarket.org for more info.

The Spencer Creek Community Growers' Market (Saturdays 10 am to 2 pm) has produce, crafts, and locally grown lunch, including a locally grown falafel wrap.

What other local farmers markets do we need to know about? Let us know on the web. ■

Pear Crumble Pie

FROM RIVER BEND FARM & PLEASANT HILL ORCHARD

River Bend Farm is a family farm with three generations of Annette Pershern's family living on it. The farm is open by the third week of May to gear up for strawberry season. A farm store offers not only items grown there but also items made in the community, such as honey, quilts, soaps, jewelry, cards and paintings. River Bend also carries its own hazelnuts, local goat milk and cow milk cheeses, Biancalana pork and Northern Lights Christmas Tree Farm grassfed beef. Last year, Annette began offering jammaking and canning classes in their certified kitchen. "I offer my customers a place for them to relax, enjoy a farm setting, get fresh-picked, healthy fruits and veggies, and give them a sense of community," Annette says. "I am going to offer a lot more classes this upcoming season using the fruits from our farm! The jammaking classes were a real hit, and I will also be teaching classes where my customers can go and pick some of the veggies, prep them and then can them!"

The following recipe for Pear Crumble Pie is one that Annette makes using pears grown on the farm. Hours at our farm store are from 9 am to 5:30 pm on Mondays, Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays, and until 6pm on Thursdays. Closed Sunday. (www.river-bendfarm.com)

PEAR CRUMBLE PIE

6 d'Anjou pears iuice of 1 lemon

1 tsp cinnamon

1/4 cup unbleached flour (this is your thickener)

For the crust:

4 1/2 cups unbleached flour

1 tsp salt

1 cup Crisco shortening

1 cup ice cold water

For the topping:

1 cup unbleached flour

1 cup sugar

1 stick butter

Peel and cut pears into slices and put in medium-sized bowl. Add lemon juice, cinnamon and flour and stir thoroughly, Set Prepare pie crust: Cut in shortening to salt and flour mixture in medium bowl. Add and stir in water (DO NOT over-mix). Shape into ball and roll out for deep-dish pie plate. Place pie crust into pie plate and then add fruit mixture over this.

In separate bowl, make your crumb topping, using two knives or a pastry cutter to cut in butter. Top your pie with crumb topping. Put in 375-degree oven and bake for approximately 45 minutes until golden brown.

James Beard Award semi-finalist Brendan Mahaney's fare is the thing to try if you're looking for upscale eats. The picking's slim for vegetarians, but combining a couple of appetizers would still make a great meal.

PIZZA RESEARCH INSTITUTE

530 Blair Blvd. 541-343-1307. pizzaresearchinstitute.com

Some people cry that it's not traditional pizza or the fresh-made meals cook too slowly, but PRI expresses no interest in being the same-old same-old. Known for its wise inclusion of toppings like pear and potato, some omnivorous customers order the vegan version because it's so delicious.

CHAO PRA YA

580 Adams St. 541-344-1706.

This fresh and delicious Thai food has the classics that most Americans know, like pad Thai, awesome fried rice flavors, like pineapple, and the fantastic golden pumpkin. The space is small, but more restaurants occupy the area, plus two nearby parks for outdoors lovers.

Belly Taqueria Tortilla Soup FROM BELLY TAQUERÍA

"Via mitosis, Belly has divided into two, if I remember high school science right," says chef and owner Brendan Mahaney. That original, adorable little spot on 5th Avenue is now a full-time taquería, informally known as Taco Belly, formally known at Belly Taquería. 'This taquería germinated from our Monday night taco nights that were popular and fun," says Brendan. "I have enjoyed and appreciated Mexican food since my cheffing days at Red Agave and a six-month stay in Baja. I love me a taco, the straightforward bright and deep flavors, the masterful uses of dried chilies, the kick-back, keep-itreal, keep-it-enjoyable atmosphere of a good taquería.

Euro Belly — or Original Belly — is enjoying its new, lovely, spacious spot downtown, next to Voodoo Doughnuts. in the site of the former Adam's Place. 'The good Lord willing," says Brendan, "we hope to be a delightful, meaningful long-term resident of a downtown that is showing many signs of promise and progress! Viva La Belly!"

BELLY TAQUERIA TORTILLA SOUP Serves 4

2 tbsp vegetable oil 4 garlic cloves, peeled 1 while onion sliced 2 dried pasilla chilis and 1 dried ancho, stemmed, seeded and torn 6 Roma tomatoes, roughly chopped 6 cups chicken stock Salt to taste 6 oz queso fresco 1 avocado, sliced 1 lime, cut into wedges 1 cup or so tortilla chips, crunched

Heat the oil in a mediumsized sauce pan and add garlic and onions; cook until golden, about 7 minutes. Remove garlic and onions, leaving oil, and put them into blender. Add chili pieces to the hot pan. Turn quickly to toast briefly; do not let them blacken and burn, just make them toasty and fragrant. Then remove chilies and turn off pan.

Add the tomatoes to the blender and process to a puree. Reheat the saucepan, and then add the tomato/garlic/ onion purée to it. Sizzle, sizzle. Stir, reduce and thicken to almost a paste, concentrating the flavors.

Add the broth (and a sprig of fresh epazote, if you have it) and simmer for 30 minutes. Taste for salt. Garnish with the avocado, chili pieces and tortilla pieces, (and cooked, shredded chicken if you want to make the soup more substantial). Squeeze with limes at the table. Enjoy!

Grilled Summer Squash Salad With Roquefort, Walnut's & Banyuls Vinaigrette FROM MARCHÉ RESTAURANT

The opening of the Inn at Fifth earlier this year offered an opportunity for the Fifth Street Market's flagship restaurant, Marché, to expand. They rose to the occasion beautifully with Le Bar, a Parisian-themed bar experience offering classic cocktails, wine and beer, espresso, breakfast and bistro-style fair. The 1,000-square-foot space offers an open horseshoeshaped bar where patrons can watch the chefs at work, preparing fresh, local and organic ingredients.

This delicious summer recipe is now on the menu at Marché and will be featured at the restaurant's French Regional Dinner on Wednesday, June 27, highlighting foods from the Langedoc-Rousillon. (www.marcherestaurant. com; for Le Bar call 541-743GRILLED SUMMER SQUASH SALAD WITH BLUE CHEESE, TOASTED WALNUTS AND BANYULS VINAIGRETTE Serves 4

For Vinaigrette:

1 shallot, minced

1 tbsp banyuls (a French fortified wine)

2 tbsp extra virgin olive oil

1 tbsp canola oil salt and fresh ground pepper

1 lb summer squash (green zucchini is our favorite for this) 1/4 lb Roquefort cheese or other high quality blue cheese 1/4 cup walnuts, roughly chopped and toasted

Slice the zucchini lengthwise into 1/4-inch thick slices and brush with a little olive oil. Season lightly with salt and pepper and grill over medium heat until cooked through, about four minutes a side. Set

In a small bowl whisk together banyuls, shallots, salt and pepper. Slowly whisk in the olive oil and canola oil to blend.

Seasonal. Local. Organic!

Open for Lunch, Dinner, Wine Tasting, Tours and Weekend Brunch

The Restaurant at King Estate offers exquisite cuisine in a spectacular setting. Our menu is based on ultra-local, seasonal produce, much of it grown within sight of the kitchen door, and designed to complement our array of award-winning wines.

Cascadian Nettle Pesto With Tempura Morels FROM TINKER ORCHARD

Gail Gould from Pleasant Hill's Tinker Orchard hand-harvests nettles, which she offers to customers through Eugene Local Foods (www. eugenelocalfoods.com). Nettle leaves are a nutritious and delicious wild green that is edible once it's prepared properly, to removing that famous sting" that can make your skin feel like you've had a brush with a bee.

For this recipe, Gail prepared a pesto using nettles in addition to some fresh basil (or, as she notes, it's just as good with nettles alone) and used it to dress pasta. As a delicious side to this meal from the forest, Gail dredged thin slices of local, organic morel mushrooms in tempura batter and fried them to a light golden crisp to place atop the pasta.

Avoid handling nettles with your bare hands. Nettles can be steamed or boiled and cooked the same way you would cook spinach or kale, and can be substituted for those greens in any recipe.

CASCADIAN NETTLE PESTO WITH TEMPURA MORELS

4 oz fresh nettle leaves, shredded (chopped fine and thin) 4 oz basil leaves, shredded (optional, it's good just with double the nettles, tool

2 cloves garlic 1/2 tsp salt 1/4 cup olive oil

16 oz dried Italian pasta, like penne or radiatore

For the morels garnish:

6 fresh morels, sliced in rings

1 egg white 1/4 cup flour with a pinch of salt and pepper in it 1/4 cup canola oil.

ally add the finely shredded leaves of nettle and basil. Add oil as it becomes emulsified. Boil the pasta until al dente. Place ball of pesto on hot noodles, or serve in a shot glass or small dish.

Mash the garlic cloves with the salt in a mortar; gradu-

Belgium is renowned for its vibrant and diverse beer culture. A rich tradition of culinary invention and improvisation, combined with centuries of brewing passion and expertise, helped craft a stunning variety of beer styles enjoyed around the world.

Leffe Blonde was first brewed in 1240 by the monks of Abbaye de Notre Dame de Leffe in Belgium. A spicy, faintly clove-like aroma is balanced by Leffe's creamy body and restrained dry finish.

Stella Artois' rich brewing heritage dates back to 1366 in Leuven, Belgium, where it was first brewed to celebrate the holiday season. Traditional malted barley and the highest quality European hops give Stella Artois its full flavor and delicately crisp finish.

Hoegaarden is the Original Belgian Wheat Beer, dating back to the 15th Century. A naturally cloudy beer, Hoegaarden features a secret to its refreshing flavor and spicy nose: real Curação orange peel and a dash of coriander.

Always Enjoy Responsibly.
